CMCP Survey of Black Associates

• Extending work of the Portrait Study of Asian Americans in the Law.
• How do attorneys of color think and feel about their experience in law firms?
• What are identified gaps and barriers to advancement?

CMCP Survey of Black Associates: Key Findings on Early Responses

• Black attorneys rank highest of all racial groups, including Whites, in satisfaction with law as a career
• There is an almost even split between attorneys who feel included in firm culture and that their firms demonstrate their commitment to them in meaningful ways, and those who do not
• The most frequently cited barriers to career advancement are lack of mentorship/sponsorship, lack of leadership training, and lack of opportunity for professional development and business development
CMCP Survey of Black Associates: Key Findings on Early Responses

- 40% of associates felt they had a realistic chance of making partner at their firms, 30% were neutral
- 50% of Black associates did not expect to be at their firms three years from now
- 75% of associates reported experience of overt bias in the workplace, and 90% experienced implicit bias at work
- More than 90% of Black associates reported dealing with anxiety and 50% with depression

Typical Recommendations

- Starts with leadership
- Data-driven
- Training to address gaps and challenges
- Objective recruitment standards
- Objective advancement standards
- Equitable opportunities to develop skills and networks
- Work-life balance
- Mentoring
- Assessment and accountability
Solution Group Exercise

• How has this group and its approaches contributed to diversity, positively or otherwise?
• Discuss recommendations for changes
